This fencing initiative is proudly supported by

The aim of this program is to provide fencing incentives for landholders in the Tamar Region to protect and better manage native bush and riparian areas (creeks, rivers & wetlands) to improve their condition and benefit production outcomes for landholders.

The exclusion of livestock from riparian areas benefits native fauna, improves stream bank stability and improves water quality for both on-farm use and downstream users.

Retaining native vegetation provides many benefits such as the provision of shelter for stock, crops and pasture, natural pest control, soil condition and water quality improvement, erosion control and critical habitat for threatened flora and fauna species.

Tamar NRM will be providing financial incentives and management advice to landowners in the Tamar Region from April 2007 to April 2008. Funding is now available for:

- Fencing native remnant bush & riparian areas
- Off stream stock watering facilities
- Limited weed control (including willow removal)
